

PORTFOLIO LEAD GUIDE

AI Index

How to update your portfolio score

Purpose

A consistent view

Provide a shared picture of AI maturity across portfolios.

Real, not aspirational

Track actual adoption, value delivery, and governance — not ambition.

Insight to action

Used by leadership for prioritisation, investment, and support.

What you update

Score the sub-portfolio

Assess at the sub-portfolio level — not individual initiatives.

Use observed evidence

Base every score on patterns and data you can point to today.

10 to 15 minutes

A typical update is short — keep it focused and current.

The four AI Index dimensions

01

People & Adoption

Skills uplift and day-to-day AI usage across teams.

02

Access & Enablement

Licenses, environments, and the data needed to build.

03

Build-to-Value

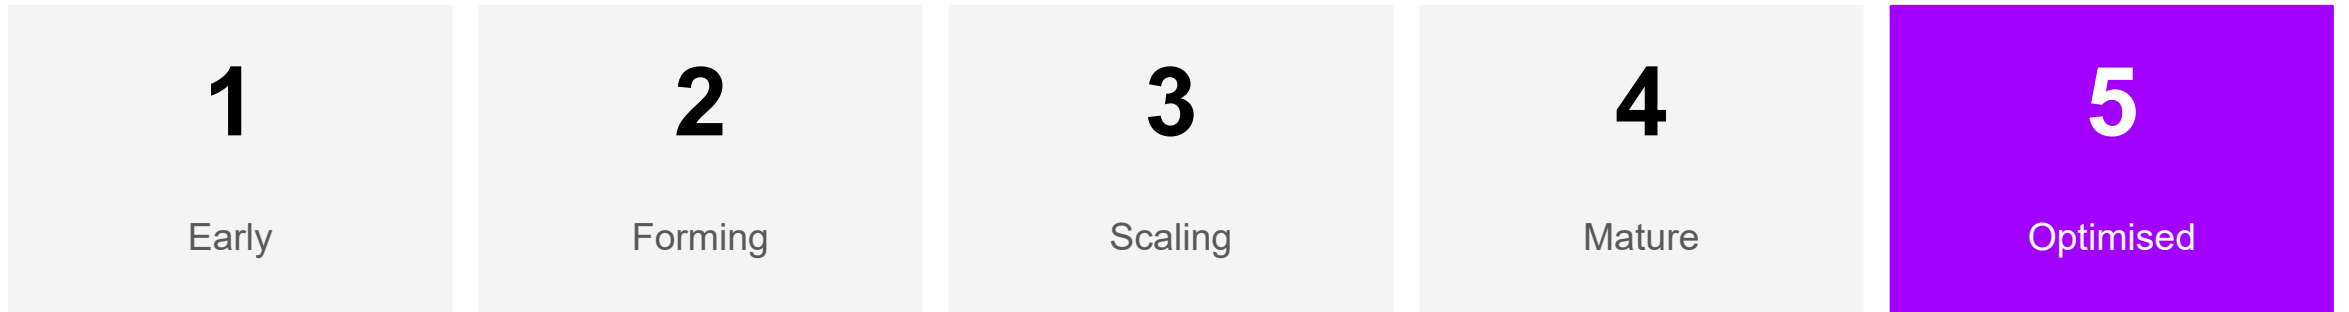

Ideas moving to production — with value tracked.

04

Conversations & Governance

Forums, backlog discipline, and Responsible AI controls.

How to score

Pick a score from 1 to 5 for each dimension.

Anchor scores to what is live or consistently in use today — not what's planned.

When in doubt between two levels, choose the lower one.

Add a short narrative

One to three lines

Explain why you chose the score — keep it concise.

Lead with evidence

Cite usage, live use cases, forums, and the cadence of activity.

Powers the dashboard

This narrative is what surfaces insight at the leadership view.

Notes and blockers

Flag what's in the way

Call out material blockers and dependencies that gate progress.

Signal inflection points

Note upcoming launches, scale events, or planned step-changes.

Ask for support

Highlight where central teams can unblock or accelerate you.

What not to do

Don't inflate scores

Honesty is what unlocks support and investment.

Don't score future plans

Reflect today's reality, not the roadmap.

Don't over-engineer

Skip deep dives on individual use cases — stay at portfolio level.

How your data is used

Portfolio dashboards

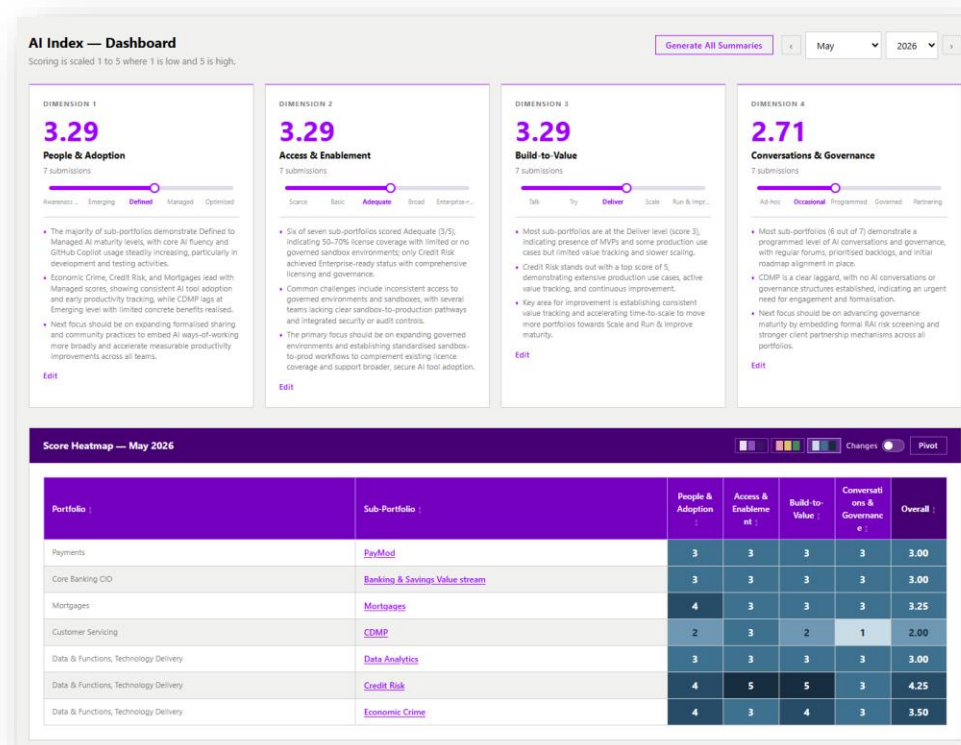

Powering portfolio and account-level views for leaders.

Heatmaps that compare

Side-by-side reads across the four dimensions.

Decisions that follow

Where to invest, where to unblock, and where to scale.
